In the X-ray image, there are several medical abnormalities that can be observed. The most prominent issue is the presence of a rib fracture on the left side of the chest. This fracture is a clear indication of a bone break, which could be a result of a fall, sports injury, or other accidents. Additionally, there is a noticeable heart defect, which is a common abnormality in X-ray images. The heart defect could be congenital or acquired, and it may require further medical evaluation and treatment to address the underlying issue.
